

Applied Diploma of Criminology at Callywith College

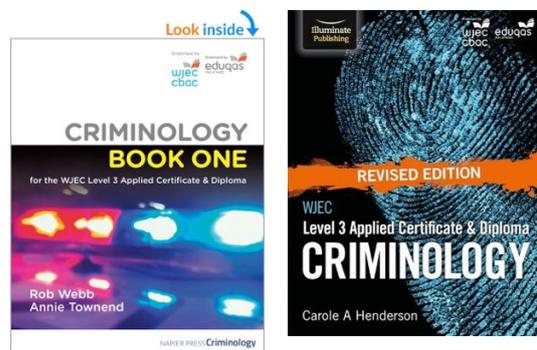

Welcome to Criminology! In our first year we complete two units, examining how campaigns can change awareness of crime, and exploring theories of criminality and how they influence social policy and law.

To get you started, here are some ideas for reading, watching, and researching. We look forward to meeting you in September!

Reading.

We follow the WJEC specification and there are two textbooks that are relevant for the course. If you can access a copy (second hand is the way to go), this is always a good place to start but is not essential as copies are available to you once you join us.

Case Studies.

We look at various criminals throughout the year, especially in unit 2 when we explore theories of criminality, to see if we can identify aspects of a criminal's past that might link to one of the theories and help explain their criminal behaviour.

The following names are useful for creating case studies:

Ted Bundy - <https://www.crimemuseum.org/crime-library/serial-killers/ted-bundy/>

John Wayne Gacy - <https://www.crimemuseum.org/crime-library/serial-killers/john-wayne-gacy/>

Things to watch.

There are an endless amount of crime programmes, both fictional and factual, and we anticipate many of you will already have your favourites! Here are a few more examples that would be relevant to the first year of criminology.
